

Conversation practice: What do I like to do?

Work together in groups of 3 people.

Start by reading the task together. One person reads the task aloud, and together you find out what you have to do. Speak as much English as possible. You can use Danish if you can't find the word in English. You can also draw or use other kinds of help.

The task:

1. Each of you takes a blank piece of paper. Find something you like to do and write it at the top of the paper. It should be a small thing that you also want to talk a little about. For example, "I like to read books".
Then give your paper to the person on your right.
2. You will now get a piece of paper from the person on your left, and it will say what the person likes to do (for example, "I like to cook").
Write three questions to the sentence (for example, "What is your favourite food?").
Then give the paper to the person on your right.
3. You will now get a new piece of paper from the person on your left. On the paper, there will be the sentence "I like to..." and three questions. Read the sentence and the three questions.
Then write three more questions. Pass the paper to your right again.
In this way, there will be 6 questions for each sentence if you are a group of 3.
4. Now you will get the paper back with your own sentence plus 6 questions. Read the questions and prepare a short talk for the group where you answer the questions. You can look up words or ask the others or your teacher for help. You can also write down key words, but try not to write everything down.
5. Then you each give your small talk in your group. If you want to, the others can ask extra questions about the talk so you can have a small conversation.
